Thankful to be alive after family’s battle with virus

3 Family members fell ill with Covid-19, one seriously, after holiday to Europe

Thammi Lim, a 68-year-old university teacher, had a temperature of 38°C on Sunday and visited a doctor who suspected she had Covid-19. She was later admitted to the National University Hospital (NUH) on Monday and diagnosed with the coronavirus. Her husband, 66-year-old university teacher, was diagnosed with the coronavirus on Wednesday. Their 32-year-old daughter, a nurse, was diagnosed with the coronavirus on Friday.

"We are very thankful to the healthcare workers and the staff at the hospital for their dedication and hard work," said Thammi Lim. "We are grateful to be alive after our family’s battle with the virus."
