Born with Alport's Syndrome (a rare genetic disorder characterised by kidney disease, hearing loss and eye abnormalities), Alex* is a teenage boy who was receiving twice-weekly dialysis at the NUH Children's Kidney Centre.

Due to the progression of his condition, Alex now requires thrice-weekly dialysis sessions but the increased frequency posed physical strain and financial stress as NUH is a distance from his home in Pasir Ris.

Thanks to the support of donors, Alex was able to receive dialysis at a private centre nearer home, as an interim solution while awaiting placement at an MOH-subsidised centre, allowing him more time to focus on his studies due to the shorter commutes and reduction in physical strain.
